

A low-angle, night-time photograph of an industrial refinery or oil processing plant. The scene is dominated by tall, dark metal structures, likely distillation columns, which are illuminated from below by numerous bright lights. The sky is a deep, dark blue, providing a stark contrast to the glowing industrial elements. The overall atmosphere is one of industrial activity and scale.

Chandler Jones International

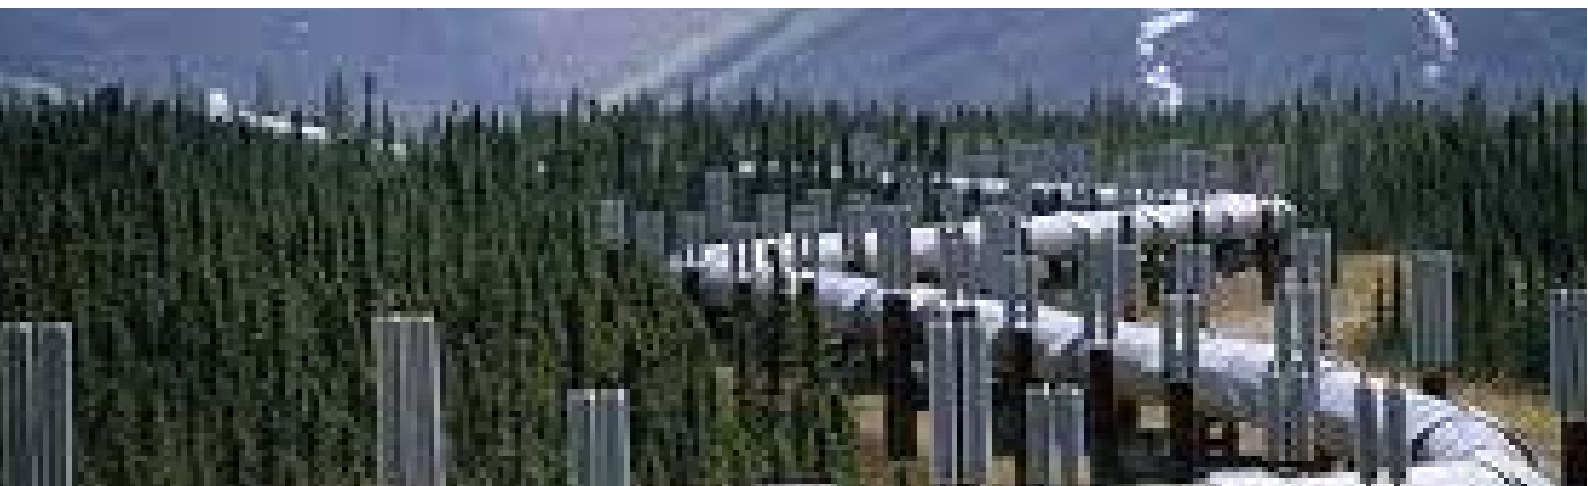

At Chandler Jones International we are committed to delivering outstanding value and to doing what we can to help our clients succeed in their ambitions. We know that is what our clients want, and expect.

We know from experience that the most sought after recruitment advisers are those who can deliver that through understanding what really matters to their clients. And whether it is through investing time with clients learning about their businesses, or doing that through bespoke business analysis, or through spending time in their markets, clients tell us again and again that our investment to gain that understanding sets us apart. The combination of our recruiters' insight and understanding about the things that really matter to each client, allied with first-rate technical expertise, creates an identifiably different and valuable client experience.

Oil & Gas Recruitment

In order to continue our strategy of excellence and industry expertise we have focused on aligning our capabilities with the ever changing environment experienced by our clients. This allows us to proactively respond to changes within an increasingly diverse marketplace and ensure our clients receive specialist advice in their relevant field and recruitment services that match the demands of increasingly technically focussed sectors.

We would be delighted to talk to you about the priorities that are most important to you, your team and your business, and how we can help.
